The Living-Green Myth

Michael Maniates

Major environmental problems threaten our planet and evoke within us a need to act – a need to do something, no matter how small, to slow the damage.

But what kind of action? Businesses, governments and some environmental groups tell us that buying environmentally friendly products while living more lightly on the planet is a winning strategy. Do the little things for the earth, the story goes, and others will follow, creating an environmental tsunami of change in norms, values and behaviors. The planet will thrive.

Michael Maniates tells us that this is the wrong message. It

Forms of the Visible: An Anthropology of Figuration

Philippe Descola, Catherine Porter

Imagery and figuration are not just figments of an artist's imagination. Perception and imagination are always shaped by what habit has taught us to discern. The visual path we spontaneously trace through the world depends on where we are situated in the four regions of the ontological archipelago: animism, naturalism, totemism or analogism. Each of these four regions corresponds to a way of conceiving the objects that make up the world, of perceiving the continuities and discontinuities in the folds of the world and of drawing the dividing lines between humans and nonhumans.

Ludovic Slimak, Andrew Brown

It's August 2015. After twenty-five years of archaeological research in a secluded cave overlooking the Rhône Valley in southern France, Ludovic Slimak uncovers the remains of a Neanderthal, frozen in time – a discovery that casts fresh light on a critical turning point in human history. Could these remains belong to one of the last Neanderthals? As scientists from around the world analyze the site, their findings disrupt everything we thought we knew about the final days of these ancient humans. This discovery takes us to the defining threshold when multiple human species, once coexisting in ...

Who Owns Beauty?

Benedicte Savoy, Andrew Brown

Beauty belongs to no one. But what about the objects that museums celebrate as great works of art: to whom do they belong? Do they belong to the places where they originated? To the cultures whose genius they embody? To the enlightened collectors who saw their value and appropriated them? Or to the whole of humanity which has access to them through institutions dedicated to their preservation? And if the latter, how can we justify the fact that some people are able to enjoy what is supposed to be a universally shared heritage while others cannot?

We can begin to answer these questions, ar...

The Diver of Paestum: Youth, Eros, and the Sea in Ancient Greece

Tonio Holscher, Robert Savage

Since its discovery in 1968, the painting of a diver on a tomb in Paestum, originally the Greek colony of Poseidonia in southern Italy, has left viewers spellbound. It depicts a beautiful and enigmatic scene: a young man dives headfirst into the water from a cliff or tower. The image is joined by others from the same tomb depicting a banquet of young people drinking wine, playing games and enjoying music. Understanding this painting is often seen as a key to unlocking some of the mysteries of ancient Greek culture – and therein lies the puzzle. What is the meaning of the diver? Is it, as many ...

How the Cold War Broke the News: The Surprising Roots of Journalism's Decline

Barbie Zelizer

Most of us would agree that American journalism has problems. Rushed reporting and thin coverage. Timidity in the face of adversity. Polarized perspectives and euphemistic language. Groupthink about complicated events.

While much blame has been levelled at big tech, Barbie Zelizer traces the decline of American journalism to the Cold War. She makes the bold claim that Cold War-era practices are to blame for the state of journalism today, undermining a once-trusted media environment. This

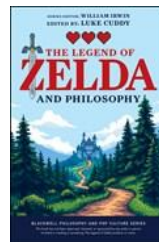

Sex Robots: The End of Love

Kathleen Richardson

There are more ways of connecting and communicating via technology than ever before. Yet loneliness is on the rise as we begin to experience an 'attachment crisis' in forming and maintaining intimate relationships.

Enter sex robots. Built from the bodies of sex dolls, they are created to help humans – particularly men – cope with our inability to connect. In this bold and trenchant critique, Kathleen Richardson explores important questions surrounding this emerging technology. What does the rise of sex robots tell us about the way that women and girls

Five Thousand Years of Monarchy

Michael Amheim

Offers a sweeping, entertaining journey through the real power structures of world history

Five Thousand Years of Monarchy challenges everything you thought you knew about political history. With wit, clarity, and a deep command of historical detail, Michael Amheim reframes five millennia of global governance through a strikingly original lens: the idea that every government, from ancient Sumer to modern China, is either a monarchy or an oligarchy—regardless of its name or apparent ideology. This provocative framework reveals insights into some of history's greatest puzzles and personalities...

30 Great Books That Made History

Jaume Aurell

Today, many readers could easily list thirty classic authors, or thirty classic works of art, literature, music, philosophy, or science. But would they be able to name thirty classic works of history, despite our contemporary appetite for books that re-tell the most stimulating and exciting episodes from centuries ago? In spite of history's outsized influence in the world of ideas, the books that made—and remade—the history we know so well are often forgotten.

In this panoramic book, distinguished historian Jaume Aurell sets out to introduce readers to a new canon of historical writing. Taki...

Germany

Andrew I. Port

Few countries are more haunted by the darker aspects of their history than Germany. Nazi crimes continue to cast a long shadow at home and abroad. Germans have nevertheless managed to put their violent, genocidal past behind them, creating a peaceful and prosperous democracy at the heart of Europe.

In this refreshing book, Andrew I. Port tells the story of that extraordinary transformation, from the vilified, destitute and divided Germany of 1945 to the respected, wealthy and unified international power we recognise today. Tracing the histories of the eastern and western

The History of Pizza

Luca Cesari, Zachary Nowak

Pizza is the Italian food that has conquered the world: from Brussels to LA, from Beijing to Buenos Aires, pizzas and pizzerias can be found everywhere today. But what are the origins of this food and how did it rise from its humble origins to become the world best-loved food?

The story begins in the narrow alleys of Naples where, in the late eighteenth century, the city's impoverished inhabitants lived in a state of constant hunger. Pizza was born as a street food to assuage the hunger of Naples's poor. Cheap and versatile, it remained anonymous for more than a century – the few outsiders who ...

White

Sylvain Tesson, Christine Gutman

When Sylvain Tesson left the colourful yellow houses of the French Riviera for a ski trek across the Alps with his friend Daniel du Lac, a high-altitude mountain guide, he didn't know what exactly would await him. Over the course of four years, from 2018 to 2021, they ascended high into the Alps in winter, following the curve of the mountains from the Mediterranean to the Adriatic, entering into a white world entirely of snow, bitterly cold and overlooked by an empty sky; only the effort of moving forward, one stride at a time, separated the days from one another. He thought he was venturing...

Distant Freedom: Essay on Chekhov

Jacques Ranciere, Steven Corcoran

Chekhov's short stories offer a subtle yet powerful message: that there is potential for change in our lives. Contrary to the image of a desolate soul, they reveal Chekhov as a beacon of hope and freedom. His narratives delve into the very essence of time, juxtaposing the relentless monotony of servitude with the glimmering moments that fracture this cycle, hinting at the existence of a different, more liberated existence. This is the way to approach all these brief tales of lost lives, nights filled with tears and joy, landscapes, or love, against the cynicism of those who believe time is des...

The Magic Kingdom and the Meaning of Life: A Philosopher Visits Disney World

Adam Kadlac

What truths and life lessons can we take away from a seemingly trivial theme park in Orlando, Florida?

Father and philosopher Adam Kadlac reflects on his own visits to Walt Disney World, arguing that Disney theme parks are a remarkably fruitful environment in which to reflect on the human condition. On the one hand, engagement with the worlds of Disney is a pervasive feature of many people's everyday experience. On the other hand, the fantastical nature of Disney theme parks casts light on aspects of our lives that may otherwise seem unexamined. If you are a parent at the Magic Kingdom, you

Social Epistemology: The Niches for Knowledge and Ignorance

Alessandra Tanesini

Human beings change the world to know it more easily and reliably. That is, we construct social and material environments, or 'epistemic niches', and develop cognitive tools to better acquire, transmit, or store information. A queue, for example, is an environment where information about the order of arrival is conveyed by a spatial configuration. Queues are niches that transform an arduous memory task into a simpler perceptual one.

In this important book, Alessandra Tanesini argues that knowledge and ignorance always occur within epistemic

Politics is everywhere. It touches almost every aspect of our lives. And it is present wherever individuals face collective choices. It is hardly surprising then that politics so often divides us, above all in an age in which the collective choices we face seem more daunting and more consequential than they have perhaps ever been.

Exploring what it means to 'think politically' in these polarised times, this cutting-edge textbook reveals the

Since its founding, activists have demanded that the U.S. live up to its democratic promise. Now, with Rules of Activism, Charles Euchner offers a concise "field guide" to the critical place of political and social movements in American politics.

The Refusalist International: A Theory of the New Protest Cycle

Mikkel Bolt Rasmussen

The many mass protests that have taken place since 2011 have been characterised by an unmistakable need to challenge, overthrow and destroy the prevailing political representations without proposing new ones. The protests are not concerned with replacing the current government or leader with others, and thus getting a better version of what we already have. Instead, they refuse all leaders, including the most critical opposition leaders: these protests are about dismantling the need for leaders. More and more people are coming to the view that it is not possible to manage the many crises withi...

Grounded in sociological insights, this book unpacks how internalized oppressions – racism, sexism, classism, and more – create a persistent 'noise' that limits our ability to connect, collaborate, and dream. But it also offers hope...

Cruelty: A Cultural History

Wolfgang Müller-Funk, Wieland Hoban

In a humane world, cruelty should not exist, and yet it has been a feature of our societies since time immemorial. From individual acts of cruelty to systematic torture and mass murder, cruelty has been humanity's constant companion, attesting to a darker side of human nature. Cruelty involves the use of violence but it is more than this, since it is organized and calculated; it involves an intention to inflict pain and suffering on others, or even to destroy the other. Cruelty is perhaps the ultimate form of violence in which the extermination of the other is staged as a threat in order to m...

Religion For Thought: Writings and Lectures, Volume 5

Paul Ricoeur, Kathleen Blamey

Since the last decade of the twentieth century, there has been talk of a return of religion in Western societies – the very societies that were regarded by many people as undergoing an irreversible process of secularization. Paul Ricoeur's philosophical writings on religion are contemporaneous with this movement of secularization and return, while at the same time his work complicates the schema. In Ricoeur's view, religion is part of the universe of convictions in which subjects live concretely, convictions that deserve to be heard and placed under the lights of argumentation and conviction....

The Philosopher: Habermas and Us

Philipp Felsch, Tony Crawford

Jürgen Habermas is the voice of a generation. One of the world's most influential philosophers and Germany's greatest living intellectual, Habermas has shaped debates, both academic and public, for more than half a century. For as long as cultural historian Philipp Felsch can remember, Habermas has been around: as an admonishing voice of reason, as the moral conscience of post-Holocaust German society, as the son of his grandparents' neighbours in Gummersbach. Is the philosopher's intellectual supremacy coming to an end today, or are his ideas gaining new relevance in the crisis times in which...

Superweak: Thinking in the 21st Century

Laurent de Sutter, Robert Hughes

We have become superheroes. Nothing can resist us anymore – persons, ideas, facts, realities, beings. We have become superheroes because we have seized on a tool that subjects everything to the scrutiny of our judgement: critique. Since its first formulation at the end of the sixteenth century, the project of critique spread from one sphere to another until it became almost universal: everyone was transformed into someone whose capacity to judge, approve and discard equals that of others. If modernity is defined as the journey we have taken to move away from the myths and dogmas of the past, ...

Carbon is much more than a chemical element: it is a polymorphic entity with many faces, at once natural, cultural and social. And yet it rarely makes the headlines as anything other than the villain of our fossil-based economy, feeding an addiction which is driving dangerous levels of consumption and international conflict and which, left unchecked, could lead to our demise as a species. Liberal politics is in crisis and it is a crisis of its own making – so say the post-liberals whose new ideology of family, faith and flag is shaping debates about the future of the Left. But are they right? Does post-liberalism offer credible answers to the problems that characterise our increasingly fragmented and unequal world?

The Chauvinist Threat: Russia's War and the West's Response

Sabine Fischer, Catriona Corke

Many attempts have been made to explain Russia's fateful decision to invade Ukraine, but the argument of the distinguished political scientist Sabine Fischer is that we can fully understand Russia's foreign policy and its aggressive war of annihilation against Ukraine only by putting Russian chauvinism at the heart of our analysis. Fischer argues that Putin's regime has long been driven by a mixture of aggressive nationalism, sexism and autocracy: taken together, these three elements constitute the chauvinist threat that stems from Moscow and that led to Russia's invasion of Ukraine.

Move First, Align Fast: Frameworks and Scorecards for Human-AI Alignment

Deepika Chopra

Move First, Align Fast is a human playbook for AI-driven transformation. It offers a candid, practical guide for leaders navigating the disconnect between bold AI strategies and organizational readiness. After nearly two decades leading enterprise-wide transformations in complex, regulated organizations like Citi, AIG, Siemens, and LPL, author Deepika Chopra saw the same pattern everywhere: companies had the right strategy, the best tools, and strong technical teams-yet the transformation stalled. The challenge wasn't technology. It was trust, culture, and human alignment.
